Unlearning in Order to Learn: A Conversation about Local Indigenous Histories

Monday, December 11, 6:00–7:00

Most of us have information in our heads about Indigenous peoples, learned in school or from popular culture. Much of

UNLEARNING IN ORDER TO LEARN:

A Conversation about
Local Indigenous Histories

December 11
6:00
at the Adult Center

this information is wrong or based on biased assumptions. This lecture with discussion will present the concept of unlearning what we already “know” as the starting point for learning about Indigenous peoples.

Alice Nash is Associate Professor of History at the University of Massachusetts Amherst. Her research interests range from the impact of colonization on family and gender relations in Wabanaki history before 1800 to current issues such as the UN Permanent Forum on Indigenous Issues. She has published numerous articles on northeastern Native American history including three in French, she was awarded the first Fulbright-Université de Montréal Distinguished Chair. During this year, she served on the RAQ editorial board and taught a course on the Deerfield Raid of 1704, connecting New England and New France. Her most recent publication is “Indigenous Peoples of the Americas to 1900.” She is the recipient of four grants from the National Endowment for the Humanities to serve as director of Teaching Native American Histories, a Summer Institute for K–12 teachers.

This program is sponsored by the Longmeadow Adult Community Center Fund, Longmeadow Historical Society and Storrs Library.

This program is being held at the Longmeadow Adult Center. To Register Call: 413-565-4150

Music Appreciation with Rob HUMBERSTON

Wednesday, December 13, 1:00-2:30

Read More/Register

Rob Humberston returns for another year of musical listening and exploration by way of his personal collection of recordings built over five decades. One unique aspect of his collection is the inclusion of recordings based on historically informed performance practices, often utilizing instruments - both original and in reproduction - appropriate to the time of the composition.

December will highlight the music of Christmas through the ages, and the New Year will begin with the Baroque Era and continue to the 20th Century. Please join us for another year of beautiful music among collegial participants.

Please Register in Advance. This program is intended for adults.

Weekly Writers Group

Thursday, December 14, 9:30-11:00
